ORDERS OF THE DAY

Debate arose and after some time the House recessed at 10:15 a.m.

ORDRE DU JOUR

Deuxième lecture du projet de loi 73, Loi modifiant la Loi de 1997 sur les redevances d'aménagement et la Loi sur l'aménagement du territoire.

Il s'élève un débat et après quelque temps, à 10 h 15, la Chambre a suspendu la séance.

10 H 30

The Speaker delivered the following ruling:-

Le Président a rendu la décision suivante :-

The House Leaders for the Official Opposition and the Third Party have each provided me with a written notice of intent to raise a point of privilege, as required by Standing Order 21(c). The Government House Leader also provided me with a written submission on this matter. The notices relate to a decision by several Ministers to attend an April 16, 2015 lock-up and press conference, dealing with a report of the Premier's Advisory Council on Government Assets, in a government building located outside the precincts. These events apparently overlapped with the timing of Question Period, and therefore meant that those Ministers would not be available to answer oral questions on that day.

I would like to thank the Members for giving me sufficient time to carefully review the issues raised in their notices. Given the thrust of our precedents on the issues, together with Speaker Carr's April 23, 2001 decision to rule on the matter of ministerial attendance at Question Period without hearing further from the Member who raised it, I too will be ruling without hearing further from the Members, as Standing Order 21(d) permits the Speaker to do.

Ministerial attendance at Question Period has been the subject of many previous points of order, but no Speaker has ever held that a Member is required to be in this Chamber at any specific time, let alone during Question Period. As Speaker Carr noted in his 2001 ruling, the many and varied duties of being an elected Member of this House often legitimately demand our attendance elsewhere. Honourable Members are assumed by their honourable colleagues to have valid, defensible and justifiable reasons for being absent from the House when it is meeting. This is one of the principal reasons why it is prohibited by our traditions and practices to draw the attention of the House to the absence of another Member.

With respect specifically to Ministerial attendance at Question Period, as far back as April 19, 1977, Speaker Rowe stated the following:

[I]t is surely the duty of the Executive Council to see that there are sufficient members of the Council in the House during the question period to make it meaningful. Certainly, the Speaker cannot be expected to take on this obligation.

For similar approaches taken by other Speakers, I refer Members to Speaker Turner's November 5, 1984 ruling, Speaker Edighoffer's April 24, 1990 ruling, Speaker Warner's May 13, 1992 ruling, Speaker Stockwell's April 21, 1997 ruling, and Speaker Peters' February 22, 2010 ruling. In short, it is well-established that Ministers cannot be compelled to attend Question Period on any given day, nor is the Speaker in any position to enforce such attendance.

Parenthetically, I will reference here the assertion made by the Member for Leeds-Grenville in his written notice that there was no need for those absent ministers to attend the lock-up.

I am not sure any Member of this House really wants to be in the business of second-guessing the priorities of other honourable members, if they think carefully about the implications of doing so.

On the issue of policy announcements, previous Speakers have indicated that it is preferable for the government of the day to make them in the House before doing so outside the House. I agree with that position. In fact, past Speakers have indicated that Members who object to policy announcements being made outside the House before being made inside the House have a legitimate grievance.

That being said, those same Speakers have also indicated that there is no authority in the Standing Orders that would allow the Speaker to require the government to make such announcements in the House before doing so by other means.

Turning to the privilege arguments in the notices, the Member for Leeds-Grenville contends that the absence of several Ministers meant that Members were deprived of the ability to hold the government to account for its policies and were therefore obstructed and impeded in the discharge of their functions. Accordingly, the Member asserts that the absence of those Ministers was a contempt of the Legislature.

As previous Speakers have indicated, Question Period is an important part of the parliamentary day because it facilitates the Assembly's accountability function. I accept that it can be frustrating to an Opposition Member, who has an oral question for a specific minister, to find that minister will not be available on a given day. However, nothing prevents the oral question from being placed and answered because the principle of collective Cabinet responsibility means that another minister can either answer the question or undertake to get one. That Member's frustration does not equate to an inability to fulfill his or her parliamentary responsibilities, and it does not rise to a contempt of the House.

As noted at page 509 of the 2nd edition of House of Commons Procedure and Practice, Questions, although customarily addressed to specific Ministers, are directed to the Ministry as a whole. It is the prerogative of the government to designate which Minister responds to which question. The Prime Minister (or the Deputy Prime Minister or any other Minister acting on behalf of the Prime Minister) may respond to any or all questions posed during Question Period. Only one Minister may respond to a question, and it need not be the one to whom the question is addressed who actually answers it. A different Minister may, under certain circumstances, reply to a supplementary question. The Speaker has no authority to compel a particular Minister to respond to a question.

There is no authority for the proposition that a Minister's absence from this Chamber in order to attend to other responsibilities amounts to obstruction of the House or its Members in the exercise of their parliamentary functions.

For his part, the Member for Timmins-James Bay suggests that last Thursday's government announcement equates to a situation that happened in 2003 when the government of the day presented a Budget-type speech outside the House at a time when the Legislature was prorogued. In that case, Speaker Carr had found that a prima facie case of contempt had been established because the government of the day might have been purposely circumventing parliamentary processes when it expressly indicated that the presentation was motivated by its desire to have a "direct conversation with the people of Ontario".

Unlike what happened in 2003, there has been no similarly explicit indication by the government relating to the intention of last Thursday's lock-up and press conference. In addition, whereas there is a tradition of making budget presentations in the House, no such tradition attaches to the tabling of a report or an announcement in respect of such.

In this instance, then, the government's policy announcement outside the House was rather similar to announcements that previous governments have often made outside the House.

With respect to the argument that restrictions were placed on the number of Members who could attend the lock-up, the lock-up is not a proceeding in Parliament, and in fact did not even take place in the Parliamentary Precinct, so it is not a matter for the Speaker. The important point is that nothing prevented Members from being in the House, if they so chose, to exercise their privilege of freedom of speech.

For the foregoing reasons, I find the Member for Leeds-Grenville and the Member for Timmins-James Bay have not made out a prima facie case of privilege or contempt.

In closing, I thank all parties for providing me with their submissions on this matter.

The Speaker delivered the following ruling:-

Le Président a rendu la décision suivante :-

Yesterday, the Member for Leeds-Grenville provided me with an additional written notice of intent to raise a point of privilege, as required by Standing Order 21(c). The notice refers to the release last week of the Report of the Premier's Advisory Council on Government Assets, and principally about the fact this announcement took place outside of the Legislative Assembly and at a time that conflicted with that day's Question Period.

I have to advise the Member that I cannot accept his notice. A point of privilege must be raised at the earliest opportunity after the alleged breach has occurred. Having received the Member's notice only late last night, which relates to events that occurred four days previous, I do not believe the Member has met the timeliness requirement.

However, I think the Member will also see, in the ruling I just delivered, that the matter he sought to raise was fully addressed in my response to the notice provided by his colleague, the Member for Timmins-James Bay.
